

SUPER TELESCOPE CAMERA FILMED UFO AT 4,000+ MPH!

In 1963, US Air Force scientist Dr Walter F. Manning invented a telescope capable of observing a missile in flight at 130 miles down range. It had a near-1,000-inch effective lens which, coupled to a high-speed camera, was capable of filming the closest details of a missile, even one moving at thousands of miles per hour.

The 1,000-inch super telescope, utilising diffraction grating technology, was first deployed at Big Sur in 1964. Manning, together with Dr Robert M. Jacobs, used it that year to film the very first test flights of a nuclear anti-missile missile.

However, after developing the film of the test flight, the two scientists discovered they had captured more than just one of the Air Force's latest 1,000 mph super missiles.

The Air Force's Office of Special Investigations (OSI) called Jacobs into a special meeting to review an image taken of a disc-shaped craft overrunning the 1,000-miles-per-hour nuclear anti-missile missile, engaging in what may have been high-speed photo shots of its warhead and propulsion system in flight, circling the craft at extreme speed as if examining it from every angle.

According to calculations the UFO, estimated at about 60 feet in diameter, had to have been operating in excess of 4,000 mph alongside the anti-missile and at hundreds of miles per hour latitudinally. The disc-shaped UFO was not only able to fly precisely around the missile but it easily outpaced it, even though the missile was travelling at full speed.

The film footage taken through the telescope apparently shows the disc rapidly circumnavigating the anti-missile missile while the missile was tracking at several thousand miles per hour. By implication, anti-missile missile technology, coupled with nuclear warhead technology, could represent a threat even to an advanced extraterrestrial species.

Dr Jacobs has commented publicly about the device: "Now, exactly what was that?"

His obvious anger over the official secrecy surrounding UFOs is both credible and authentic. He is also a student of diplomacy, and knows that failure to respond to the UFO's 'symbolic concern' about our nuclear anti-missile missile capability with some kind of genuine 'gesture' could represent a 'primitive threat' to the UFOs, from wherever they have originated.

Dr Jacobs was sworn to secrecy after being questioned about the Air Force's film of the UFO. He was told, "This never happened!", and advised of the repercussions of revealing the event—which, 34 years ago, would have involved his incarceration for the better part of his life.

Later, when Jacobs was long retired, he became disenchanted with the Air Force's official policy on the UFO event, and, possessing a conscience that would not allow him to continue his secrecy about so important an event, he went public about the entire affair. He has indicated that he no longer cares what discipline or ruination the Air Force might dish out in his now later years.

The Air Force, however, responded to enquiries by issuing false reports about Dr Jacobs. It claimed that not only had Jacobs never been employed by the Air Force in the 1960s, but that there was no 1,000-inch telescope at Big Sur at the time (although it was a mobile mounted telescope). The Air Force fraudulently maintained that no Dr Walter F. Manning ever existed, and alleged that no such picture of a UFO was ever taken during any test flight of a missile; in fact, that no such missile system ever existed at Vandenberg Air Force Base.

The Air Force's claims, however, fell flat on the basis of evidence provided to the Sightings TV show by Dr Jacobs who has adopted a serious attitude towards revealing the truth about UFOs.

Unfortunately for the US Air Force and its claims about Jacobs, publicly available records do exist which verify that Dr Jacobs was employed by the Air Force at Vandenberg AFB, and was involved in and responsible for filming and developing test-range 'filmography' of the advanced anti-missile missiles of the era. Moreover, records exist of Dr Walter Manning—who is somewhat of a legend in the photo-imaging telescope industry—and of the 1,000-inch Big Sur telescope.

The original film footage of the incident involving the UFO overrunning the USAF anti-missile missile in flight reportedly still exists, but is officially 'missing' or 'sequestered'.

From his archives Dr Jacobs, a photo-reconnaissance film expert, has produced authenticated 35 mm film of the telescope being moved in its trailer to Big Sur, then unloaded and set up by the Air Force under the eye of Dr Manning and Dr Jacobs, as well as film detailing the telescope's test operations (though not yet of the UFO).

In the film, Dr Jacobs and Dr Manning can be seen shooting film with the Air Force at Big Sur in 1964, so there is no question as to their participation and role in the Air Force operation.

Dr Jacobs' involvement in the affair has been authenticated by researchers from the Sightings television series, as has his service record which the Air Force continues to deny. The official documents obtained, along with Jacobs' large film library and personal records, prove that Dr Jacobs was involved in this work precisely as he claims.

Because none of the film of the alleged UFO has been released by the Air Force, Dr Jacobs' personal knowledge and eyewitness evidence of this event cannot be verified completely. According to Sightings, such appears to be the Air Force's policy regarding this and other such incidents.

However, flying saucers are no longer the province of 'nut cases' and 'schizo-phrenics': they must be the object of very careful and cautious study by scientists and sociologists.

VATICAN PRIEST CONFIRMS EXTRATERRESTRIAL REALITY

Readers will recall the item we published in Twilight Zone two issues ago (5/04) about Vatican insider Monsignor Corrado Balducci who has proclaimed on Italian television that extraterrestrial contact is a real phenomenon. Now, as we go to press in early September, a recent interview with him is about to be published as the appendix to a new book, Confirmation, on the subject of alien abductions.

According to Monsignor Balducci, of the Congregation for the Evangelisation of Peoples, there is no conflict between the Christian faith and belief in aliens. Furthermore, he suggests it is wrong to assert that reports of encounters with aliens are not credible.

"It is reasonable to believe and affirm that extraterrestrials exist," he says. "Their existence can no longer be denied, for there is too much evidence for the existence of extraterrestrials and flying saucers."

In the interview, Monsignor Balducci says that clues such as the existence of UFOs indicate that extraterrestrials are further evolved than humans. He claims that even if extraterrestrials superior to humans were encountered, this discovery would not call into question the teachings of Christianity. He refers to a passage in the New Testament where St Paul refers to Jesus Christ as the King of the Universe, not just the King of the World. "This means that everything in the Universe, including extraterrestrials and UFOs, are reconcilable with God."

A renowned exorcist and expert on demonology, Monsignor Balducci has written two books about the devil. Listed in the Vatican directory as "Priest of Honour" since 1964, he is an official member of the papal household or family.

Monsignor Balducci says his first question to an alien would be about their concept of God. However, he goes on to say: "It is very important to lend credence to the eyewitness accounts, but we must be very careful to ensure that they are authentic. I have also heard of people who have claimed to have had contacts, but who unfortunately were not mentally sound."

Asked to comment on the interview, a spokesman for the Catholic Media Office in London said: "The fundamental creation message relates to humans here on Earth. If aliens were shown to exist, this would not cast doubt on the veracity of the Gospels. But we would have to ask whether the Christian atonement was applicable to them."

ATLANTEAN RECORDS FOUND AT SCOTT STONES, BIMINI

As we've received so many requests for more news of the underwater temple ruins found off Bimini (T/Zone, 4/06), we thought we'd publish a recent interview with Mr Aaron DuVal, President of the Egyptology Society in Miami, Florida.

"We have a truly majestic statement to make to the world! It may come as little surprise to some and great surprise to others; some will be jubilant, some will be horrified, and some will be saddened almost beyond words. But, regardless of the jealousies, fears and clambering assumptions, we are pleased and honoured to announce, on behalf of and with the permission of the discoverers, that the Scott Stones are not merely the remains of some ancient and unexpected megalithic society which existed long ago near Bimini, but they are in fact part of the Atlantis of romantic legend—the very Atlantis which Plato described!

"Yes! And the explorers can now prove it! They had already discovered ancient calendars, maps, clay artefacts, etc., but the real clincher to this claim was their discovery of ancient records at the site!

"Once again, according to the explorers, it was the knowledge of Professor Scott (in whose honour the stones were first named) which allowed them initially to locate the actual records—records which can be expected to vastly illuminate our understanding of the earlier days of mankind. And as for any previous presumptions that these ruins might somehow lead to a re-interpretation of the history of civilisation, these presumptions can no longer be looked upon as mere conjecture.

"But you say, 'What, exactly, makes these explorers so sure that their find is actually part of Plato's Atlantis?' Well, their answer is: 'There's a lot of talk these days about the possibility of finding ancient records, especially around Giza, but everyone seems to have forgotten about the original records of Sais.'

"The explorers say they've identified the long-lost chronological records used by the priest of Sais who first informed Solon, back in the sixth century BC. The existence of these records was confirmed, as you may know, following the days of Plato, but they subsequently fell into obscurity. The explorers say they've located and deciphered these very records, and that these Egyptian records correlate with the records found at the Scott Stones! The record is the same, they say, on both sides of the ocean, and the Sais/Solon/Plato account for the end of the Atlantean empire can now be independently confirmed.

"The Scott Stones were discovered some three and one-half years ago, and the explorers themselves had hoped to bring the information to the public last summer. But personal injury, sickness and threats of betrayal severely stalled their original efforts. Now, after months and months of delay, the information is lining up nicely and the discoverers are looking forward to revealing their identities. So, they have tentative plans to try once again this summer, or certainly by the fall, to introduce the information to the public. They have not, as yet, stepped forward personally, simply because they have not wished any hindrance in their ongoing research.

"As for the two sets of records, however, they are still being intensely studied and interpreted. So nothing further will be released, just now, pertaining to these records. But be sure, some very exciting pictures, publications, graphics and videos are already ready, and more are being prepared. And the Egyptology Society in Miami hopes to play a role in bringing this history-shaking information to the fore.

"So the proof is now in. But, of course, Atlantis is a somewhat querulous subject in many circles. And it seems that most of the 'authorities' that have been approached so far have found themselves instantly appalled by the mere thought of such a possibility. Soon, however, some of these 'authorities' may find themselves sorely embarrassed.

"One of the reasons that the Egyptology Society has been included as part of this exciting adventure is that I personally feel, just as the discoverers, that this very precious information should, by all means, completely bypass the contemptuous and doubt-filled 'established order'—until such time as all the evidence has been fully prepared for the slaughter!"

Mr DuVal says the Egyptology Society will forward updates to NEXUS Magazine as they become available.
